

A FEW OF THE PRETTY GIRLS AT THE UNIVERSITY

The above is a remarkable photograph, not alone as a group of fine looking girls interested in educational pursuits, but from the fact that it is said to be the largest of its kind ever made in the west. Heretofore groups of four or five, or at the most seven, have attracted attention, but no group of nine heads on a single sheet has been exhibited. The girls are the seniors in the kindergarten course at the state university, and from left to right are: Ethel Clark, Naomi Deal, Hattie L. Waples, Leahy Dawn Douglass, Boda Nordvall, Cora Bassett, Mildred Douglas, Erma Fenton and Estelle Daft.

A new hobby and one peculiarly appropriate to the Lenten season is occupying the attention of the young matrons just now. Luncheons, said to be delicious and satisfying, at which eight guests may be served are being provided at the maximum cost of $1.00 or 12½ cents apiece. Of course a few trimmings in the way of coffee and jam or jelly may be added, but the real filling part of the meal must come within the limit. This fact should add to the popularity of the domestic science teacher, and it doubtless will.

Papers from Washington, D. C., are most warm in their praise of the work of Mrs. James Henry Cox, whose charming personality and wonderful musical gifts made such a favorable impression on Salt Lake last year, when she was here the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Van Housen. Mrs. Cox has moved from Baltimore and taken up her residence in Washington, though still retaining her place as leader in a great church choir in Baltimore. She has been most cordially welcomed to the musical circles of the capital city.

The news that the Trent family will probably return to Salt Lake for at least a part of each year was welcomed by a large circle of local friends. Few families have enjoyed the popularity which the Trents enjoyed in the days when they made their home here, and they will be warmly welcomed back.

A most interesting matrimonial announcement of the week which appeared exclusively in these columns, was that of the engagement of Miss Fern Scott and Le Grand Young, Jr. The announcement has called forth many cordial expressions of congratulation to the two young people.

Judging from the styles so far shown, the season is to be a comforting one in the matter of millinery. That is to say, that apparently anything so long as it is a hat is good style. There may, of course, be some modes more favored than others; there may be some which are more decidedly up-to-date, but in the main a headpiece of any shape whatever will be quite wearable. The turban will be a favorite, of course, and very large hats and very small hats will be seen, but the woman with ingenuity and a gift for looking well dressed will find that all things are possible in the realm of headgear.
